CONFERENCE RIVALRIES IN THE TOP 10

Competition is fierce both on and off the field, as this year's top colleges and universities hail from major national collegiate athletic conferences. Kicking off with the SEC, the University of Georgia ranked No. 1 in the report card. The PAC-12 featured four schools, including Oregon State University (#2), University of Oregon (#4), University of Arizona (#6), and Stanford University (#9). Two Midwestern powerhouses from the Big Ten were ranked, including the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor (#3) and University of Wisconsin-Madison (#10). Finally, the University of Texas at Austin (#5) represented the Big 12, while Brown (#8) represented the Ivy League.

SCHOOLS MAKING MOVES

Comparing year-over-year rankings, it is clear that schools continue to make sexual health a priority. For example, the University of California-Los Angeles made the largest jump up in the rankings, moving an impressive 40 spots from #100 to #60. Right behind, was Vanderbilt University rising 39 spots from last year, bringing them to #47. The University of Southern California made headway rising 37 spots, from #73 to #36. Lastly, Purdue University-Main Campus went from #120 to #84 jumping 36 spots.

BRINGING IN THE BOTTOM 10

This year the bottom ten welcomes new and old schools. Three new schools join the bottom ten with Marquette University taking the #131 spot. Chicago State University moved down twelve spots, coming in at #133. Dropping seven spots is Seton Hall University with the #135 spot. A few other schools remained from last year's ranking, such as Baylor University who went from #131 to #132. The University of New Orleans also dropped one spot, ranking #134.

RIVALRIES IN THE RANKINGS

School rivalries are presented throughout the Trojan™ Sexual Health Report Card with schools competing for the top spot:

- Florida State University takes on in-state rival University of Miami, coming in at #16 and #29 respectively.
- Ivy League rivals University of Pennsylvania and Harvard University continue to fight to show who is best with University of Pennsylvania taking the lead by one spot. Both schools moved up in ranking, University of Pennsylvania from #21 to #14 and Harvard from #29 to #15.
- University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill dominates Duke University, ranking #20 and #35, respectively.

RANKING METHODOLOGY

The Trojan™ Sexual Health Report Card is an annual ranking of the sexual health resources and information available to students on campuses nationwide. Independent research firm, Sperling's BestPlaces, analyzed 140 major campuses drawn from conferences within the Bowl Championship Series and beyond. These schools include students representing all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Sperling's BestPlaces researchers collected extensive data via student health center representatives, along with follow-up secondary research on those centers and services they provide on campus. Student health centers were graded on services across 11 categories:

- Quality of sexual health information and resources on website
- Contraceptive availability -- free or at cost
- Condom availability -- free or at cost
- HIV testing on-site (On/off campus, cost)
- STI testing on-site (On/off campus, cost)
- Lecture/outreach programs and student peer groups for sexual health education
- Sexual assault programs, resources or services
- Overall website usability and quality
- Hours of operation
- Allow drop-ins or require appointments for student scheduling
- Extra credit

Creating Positive Change in Sexual Health

Since its inaugural report in 2006, the Trojan™ Sexual Health Report Card continues to grow and positively impact college campuses as students continue to push to improve their rankings. Schools continue to elevate their standing as they strive for better offerings on campus.

Pleasure & Protection on Campus

To further encourage students' to have an active interest in their sexual health, Trojan will be donating more than 100,000 condoms to schools throughout the country in 2016.
